ALEXANDRIA AMUSEMENTS.

THE MAJESTIC CINEMA.— This popular picture palace has secured a veritable masterpiece this week in the shape or Gabriela d'Annunzio's famous work, "The Dagger." The cinematographic version of which is highly artistic. There are also two fine comic films, Charlie Chaplin in "At the Rink" and "Oscar Goes bathing." Studies of the life of an ostrich are also quite interesting.

THE CHANTECLER CINEMA.— The main attraction at the Chantecler Cinema this week is "Appearances" after Maurice Donnay's famous masterpiece which was played as the Comedie Francaise ninety six times during the course of a few years, almost a record. The cinema version is played by some of the best known actors and actresses in France.

On Saturday, March 29 a Whist Drive followed by a concert was given at the No. 3 Egyptian Stationary Hospital, Kantara. The whole evening was an emphatic success and congratulations are due to Corporals Bews and Christie for the able manner in which they organised the whole entertainment. An outstanding feature of the Concert were the comic songs of Sgt. Aff. Kent, who is an excellent comedian and each number was rapturously received. Special mention must be made of Charles Olive who gave two character studies from Dickens, viz: Fagin and Sydney Carton, the latter in the speech to the French revolutionary tribunal being particularly fine. Trooper Rees rendered two comic songs in excellent style. The recitations of S/Sgt. Bleasdale and Sgt. Duncan were also much appreciated, Sgt. Carter at the Piano left nothing to be desired. This also applies to the lighting effects of Corporal Crisp. At the conclusion Sgt. Duncan in a most able speech called for a vote of thanks to the organisers and performers and a most enjoyable evening terminated with the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

OVERLOADING CARRIAGES IN CAIRO.

"I wish a law could be made and kept regulating the number of people to be drawn by one horse, or one donkey," writes a Cairo lady.

WIRELESS TELEPHONY FEAT.

The Marconi's Wireless Telegraph Company has published an official statement to the effect that wireless telephone communication has been established between Ireland and Canada. Experiments which have been carried out during the past six months were brought to a successful conclusion between Clifden, Co. Galway, and Cape Grace. The service is not yet available to the public. The March number of "The Times Engineering Supplement," contains an article by Dr. J. A. Fleming, F.R.S., explaining the principles on which this achievement is based. The fundamental requirements are an extremely sensitive detector of the wireless waves and means for magnifying the signals after they have been detected. In both these operations an essential part is played by the "valve detector," a little instrument not unlike an incandescent electric lamp, and Dr. Fleming explains the successive steps by which it has come to be possible to magnify the sound to such an extent that it can be heard even amid the roar of the engines of an aeroplane.

ing demonstrations, resumed their duties yesterday morning.

The first thing that attracted attention in the morning yesterday was the absence of trams and the scarcity of cabs in the streets. The town looked quieter and business was normal, but at about 9 a.m. a number of groups of the poorer and rougher elements began to form processions and to march with banners in the streets, especially in the kisms of Attarin and Manshieh. The tramwaymen who could not fully participate in Wednesday's demonstration organised a special one of their own yesterday and spent a couple of hours yelling and shouting in the back streets.

At about 10 o'clock a large number of school boys, under 15 years, were seen returning from their schools which they found to be still closed, and they amused themselves as they went home by shouting cries in imitation of the demonstrators of the previous day.

In the afternoon a group of about 50 Egyptian girls organised a demonstration in a well-ordered procession through the Sherif Pasha Street. They were neatly dressed in black with white sailor collars and were without hats or any head-covering. They carried banners and shouted in shrill unison "Long live Egypt" etc., after an effendi who, with two women-teachers in native costume, marched at their side. A crowd of street boys surrounded them as they proceeded.

TRIAL OF RIOTERS AT TANTA.

Our Tanta correspondent writing on Monday says: A military tribunal sat here on Saturday morning to try the men arrested for rioting at Kafr el Sheikh. The accused numbered ten. After the hearing of their cases the Court adjourned and it was announced that judgment would be delivered on Wednesday.

COPTIC-MOSLEM FUSION.

Fraternal relations between Moslems and Copts are continuing. A fraternal visit was paid by the Moslems to the Coptic Church at Tanta on Sunday last. The Sheikh Mohamed el Zawhry, the superintendent of the Ahmadie Mosque and the Maahad and some of the Ulemas visited the church and they were met by the priest and the head teacher of the Coptic School of Tanta and some notables. The sheikh delivered a speech on the mutual benefits of fraternity and the speaker was greeted with cheers. Afterwards the priest spoke in the same vein. Then the two kissed each other and had their photographs taken. The Coptic priests and some of the notables will return the visit to them to-day.

RECEIVING THE NEWS IN TANTA.

Our Tanta correspondent writing on April 8, says:— On Monday last at 6.30 p.m. the aeroplane post arrived at Tanta, bringing a message of peace in the form of the "Official Journal," in which General Allenby's decision to release the four deported Pashas and permitting Egyptians to go to Europe was published. As soon as the news was heard crowds of people surged round the police station giving vent to loud cheers, and they spent the whole night in making demonstrations. I take the opportunity of thanking and praising the British soldiers who did not interfere with the demonstrators. On the next day, Tuesday, an official procession was organised as follows: First came the religious leaders and students, then judges and lawyers, notables and merchants followed by the employees and the workmen. Words fail me to describe that procession,—flags were raised and the loudest possible cheers were heard. The police, the Hakemdar and the Mamour walked with the procession and kept order. The cheers were raised:—"Long live Liberty," "Long live Independence," "Long live Justice," and "Long live the fraternity between the Copts and the Moslems." Everyone is grateful to the great General, the ambassador of peace who came to our country and gave us peace, and we thank our Sultan of Egypt who has joined with the High Commissioner in entire unity.

EXPRESS TRAINS FROM PORT SAID TO CAIRO.

In the afternoon, an express and a passengers train from Alexandria, and an express and several goods trains from Port Said reached Cairo. It is stated that the trains will run between Cairo and Fayoum daily, but as yet no passengers are to be conveyed. On Tuesday last at 9.30 a.m. a train composed of 37 waggons left Cairo for Wasta and Fayoum.

SUDAN CATTLE ARRIVING.

The Ministry of Agriculture is expecting to receive a large number of sheep and cattle from the Sudan for Cairo and Alexandria at the end of the coming week.

TYPHUS AGAIN.

According to an Arabic contemporary the typhus epidemic which has begun at this season in former years is spreading in Cairo and in other towns of Lower Egypt.

COMMUNICATIONS GRADUALLY BEING RESTORED.

Train movement on the main lines of Lower Egypt remain the same. The railway lines of Upper Egypt are not yet opened for conveying passengers. On Monday last, eight trains left Cairo station, one for the Canal, a second, a goods train, for Alexandria, the third an express for Port Said, the fourth an express to Alexandria, the fifth a special train to Alexandria, the sixth a train with foodstuff to Fayoum, the seventh a repairing train for Wasta, and the eight a passengers train for Alexandria. All these left before noon.

GREAT BRITISH SCIENTIST DEAD.

LONDON, April 5.

Sir William Crookes is dead. Reuter.

Sir William Crookes, was born in 1832 and was one of the greatest of scientists of the day and was the recipient of a great many well-deserved honours among which were knighthood in 1897, Order of Merit 1910. He was besides President of the Royal Society. He began his career as a pupil of Dr. Hofman at the Royal College of Chemistry and at the age of seventeen he gained the Ashburton Scholarship. After two years' study he became, first junior, then senior assistant to Dr. Hofman, until 1854, when he was appointed to superintend the meteorological department of the Radcliffe Observatory at Oxford. In 1855 he became Professor of Chemistry at the training College, Chester. In 1859 he founded the "Chemical News," and in 1864 became Editor of he "Quarterly Journal of Science."

His earliest original researches were begun whilst at the Royal College of Chemistry, and his first paper, "On the Seleno-Syanides," was published in the "Quarterly Journal of the Chemical Society." In 1861 Mr. Crooke discovered by means of spectrum observations and chemical reactions, the metal thallium, and determined its position among elementary bodies, and produced a series of analytical notes on the new metal. In 1863 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society; in 1865 he discovered the sodium amalgamation process for separating gold and silver from their ores. In 1886 he was appointed by the Government to report upon the application of disinfectants in arresting the spread of the cattle plague, which in that year excited much alarm in England. In 1871 he was a member of the English expedition to Oran to report upon the total phase of the solar eclipse which occurred in December of that year. In June, 1872, he laid before the Royal Society laborious researches on the atomic weight of thallium,—researches that extended over a period of eight years. In 1872 he began his experiments on "Repulsion resulting from Radiation." One important result of these investigations is the Radiometer. In 1875 he received from the Royal Society the award of a Royal Medal for chemical and physical researches. In 1876 he was elected a Vice-President of the Chemical Society, and the next year a member of the Council of the Royal Society. In 1877 he described the Otheroscope,—a greatly modified Radiometer, susceptible of an almost endless variety of forms. In 1878 he gave before the Royal Society a "Bakerian Lecture," containing another long series of experiments and observations on "Repulsion resulting from Radiation." In 1878 the Royal Society published in its "Philosophical Transactions" records of his experiments on "Molecular Physics in High Vacua."

In 1880 the French "Académie des Sciences" bestowed on Mr. Crookes an extraordinary prize of 3,000 francs and a Gold Medal, in recognition of his discoveries in Molecular Physics and Radiant Matter. In 1881 he acted as a Juror at the International Exhibition of Electricity in Paris. In 1885 Mr. Ferguson and the medal was bestowed upon him and in 1889 the medal of the French exhibition of 1889 at Paris, that of the Society of Arts (the Albert gold medal); the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia in 1912 presented him with the Elliott Cresson gold medal and the same year a medal from the Society of Chemical Industry. His principal publications have been: Select Methods in Chemical Analysis, (4th edition, 1905); Manufacture of Beetroot-Sugar in England, 1870; Handbook of Dyeing and Calico-Printing, 1874; Dyeing and Tissue Printing, 1882; Kerl's Treatise on Metallurgy, 1868, with Ernst Rohrig; Wagner's Chemical Technology; Auerbach's Anthracen and its Derivatives, 2nd edition, 1880; Ville's Artificial Manures, 3rd edition, 1909; A solution of the Sewage Question; The Profitable Disposal of Sewage; The Wheat Problem, 1884; Diamonds, 1909, and a third edition of this work, in connection with the cultivation of wheat in England during the war, was brought up to date by him in 1917.
