MUSIC IN CAIRO.

SUNDAY CONCERT AT THE KURSAAL.

A well chosen and representative programme attracted a large and enthusiastic audience to the Cairo Kursaal on Sunday morning last when M. Rosson undertook, not by no means light task of conducting some of the masterpieces of musical writing. Mendelssohn's "Athalie" overture opened the concert and was given a spirited performance by the members of the Orchestra, who one and all appeared to be in excellent form. Tchaikowsky's Sixth Symphony the first and second movements only came next. The "Allegro non troppo" which has so many beautiful themes preceding the "Allegro con grazia," the latter proving a thoroughly enjoyable item with its fascinating lilt. Delussy's exquisite "Prelude a l'apres midi d'un Faune" was delightful, its delicate beauty being given full attention by the conductor who controlled his forces admirably. Wagner's "Kaiser Marche," from "The Twilight of the Gods" formed an impressive contrast to the Delussy poem, and was accorded a very hearty ovation at its conclusion. Saint Saens was represented by his descriptive tone poem "Le Deluge" in which M. Minatto skilfully played the violin solo.

Possibly the most wonderful item during the morning from the point of view of general excellence of performance was the Rimsky Korsakow composition entitled "La Grande Paque Russe," which is an overture founded upon the themes of Russian Church. The peculiar charm which attaches to these melodies is quite unique, and the atmosphere of the work is so extremely marked that the listener is transported into another music world entirely. Altogether the programme left little to be desired, and proved eminently satisfactory to a large and musical audience.

JUSTICE DEMANDED FOR DJAMAL.

The "Omma" (from an article suggesting that Djamal Pasha, called the "butcher" of Syria, should be tried and punished for his atrocious deeds in Syria).—To the authorities concerned in the government of the Allies we beg to address these words. We request them to do justice to our community and deal severely with the man who dealt mercilessly with a pacific people living quietly at home. We request them to have no pity for those who acted most cruelly in the Lebanon and Syria purposely contriving to annihilate the population by means of starvation, deportation, tyrannical treatment, and other sorts of barbarships. On behalf of every Syrian and Lebanese we ask for the trial of Djamal Pasha on account of the many atrocious crimes he committed in that land. We want him to be tried because he has violated all human and international laws and every moral rule by putting innocent people to death, and bringing famine and destruction and ruin to people, and death to women and children, ravaging the country and acting like a ferocious wolf....

GOOD ADVICE TO MOSLEMS.

"Wady el-Nil (from an account of the trial of the Adam proprietary case by the Alexandria Mehkemeh Sharieh of First Instance).—The President of the Mehkemeh then made the following remarks to both parties: "You have made us ashamed before people. The Europeans are always busily engaged in doing what is advantageous to them, and you are engaged in doing such useless things. Do you not see the laziness and lie that stamp the character of our people? Would it not have been more useful to try to remedy these defects and other social diseases which are spreading amongst us? It would have been nobler for you to use the pen with which you have written these notes about the case, for writing what is useful to the nation and giving such advice as "Act unitedly," "Don't envy each other," "Don't hate one another," "Do what other people are doing," "Seek to advance morally with raised heads and not with humility." We hope you, as religious men, will try to remedy the diseases spreading among Moslems."

A GOOD OMDEH.

The "Basir" (from its travelling correspondent in Lower Egypt).—The Omdeh of Tanouf recently did a risky task when he met two robbers and arrested them in flagrante delicto. He did not mind their threats that they would fire at him but rushed and seized them without fear and handed them over to the judicial service. The same Omdeh has undergone another risk on a similar occasion and succeeded in arresting the criminals. The ghaffir who accompanied him was rewarded.

FUNERALS AND PUBLIC HEALTH.

The "Akhbar" (commenting on the order given by the Public Health Administration, prohibiting the holding of ordinary funeral ceremonies in the Mudiriehs and Governorates except the Governorates of Cairo and Alexandria).—There nothing peculiar in this order, for it is known here that the habits of people in Cairo and Alexandria differ greatly from those of the other provinces of Egypt. When a person dies in Cairo only friends and acquaintances attend his funeral, and if a sympathiser goes to express his condolences to the family of the deceased, he only stays for about half an hour and leaves. But in the districts, matters are not so in this respect. People are used to great social habits there in funeral ceremonies, especially when a notable dies in the district. On many occasions, all the people of the district, and go to attend the funeral of the notable, and many people come from different villages to take part in the ceremony. In villages people use one tent in each village for the celebration of funerals, and have no sanitary service or health precautions. Large numbers of women meet at the funeral tent and many animals sometimes stand at a very short distance from the tent. We not only approve of the Public Health Administration's order, but also suggest that the same order should be applied to both Cairo and Alexandria.

COTTON STOCKS IN EGYPT.

The "Ahram" (from its correspondent at Zagazig).—The Cotton halaka at Zigazig received 12,000 kantars of cotton from the beginning of the present cotton season up to the end of November last. According to a reliable man the big cotton Halakas in the districts are full of cotton in these days, but merchants show little inclination to purchase owing to the abundance of cotton in stock at Alexandria.

A PRINCESS' HEALTH.

The "Abaly."—Princess Fathieh Hanem, the eldest daughter of His Highness the ex-Khedive Abbas Hilmi II., who has been staying for the last five years at the Rouhbeh palace in Cairo, is now suffering from a serious disease which she had when she went to the Rhodes Island to be treated. It is stated that this disease is troublesome in winter.

UNITED SERVICES SWIMMING LEAGUE.

THE CALENDER'S CHALLENGE SHIELD.

This League which was promoted in Cairo under Y.M.C.A. auspices with Lt.-Col. Sir James W. Barrett, M.B.E., C.B., C.M.G., as president, has met with a most successful opening season. The Ezbekieh Gardens Swimming Bath, which filled a great need, was opened on August 15, and the first meeting of the League was held a week later, the objects being the promotion of all swimming sports, including water-polo, amongst the members of the Egyptian Expeditionary Force. The first Water-Polo match took place on September 7 and enthusiasm became general. During the last 3 months the bath has been the scene of some most exciting contests. The Command Depot, Abbassia, captained by E. Digby, have carried of the honours, finishing champions of the League with the following excellent record: Played 10; won 8; lost 1; drawn 1; goals for 34; against 4. The principal goal scorers were: Glover 15, Swain 9, Digby 5 and Heard 3. Including friendly games the team's record is: Played 17; won 14, lost 2, drawn 1, goals for 59, against 10. In the three representive games with Alexandria, Cairo won 2 and Alexandria 1. Altogether 60 matches have been played in the League and three very successful Swimming Galas have also been held in the Y.M.C.A. bath. The Command Depot will therefore be the first holders of the Challenge Shield, generously presented on behalf of Calender's Egyptian Damp Proof Co., by Mr. R.H. Warner, the local representative. This shield is a magnificent piece of work and has been executed in Jerusalem by skilled workmen. The trophy will be on view in the Gardens in a few days' time and a formal presentation will be made later. Medals are being given by the League to the individual members of the Command Depot team.

Secret committees in Poland are everywhere placarding posters inciting the population to take part in pogroms against the Jews.

KINGS OF ANCIENT EGYPT.

M. GAUTHIER'S REPERTOIRE PHARAONIQUE.

(By Joseph Offord).

The first fascicule of volume fifteen, 1918, of the Bulletin de l'Institut Français d'Archéologie Orientale of Cairo is completely occupied with M. Henri Gauthier's "Repertoire Pharaonic pour servir d'Index au Livre des Rois d'Egypte." It contains 140 pages and reproductions of some 3,000 cartouches or royal and princely names with and without this badge of sovereignty.

This statement will give some idea of how our knowledge of the titles, iconography and chronology of the Pharaohs has advanced since the time when Bunsen in his "Egypt's Place in Universal History," and Brugsch in his "History of Egypt from the Monuments," endeavoured to give the list and the correct succession of the Kings by means of collecting the inscriptions including the lists of names on the tablets of Sakkara, Abydos etc. and in the Manetho and the Turin papyrus. Their efforts were true pioneer work, however, and deserve full recognition. Really this number of the Bulletin forms the sequel to M. Gauthier's five volumes of the "Livre des Rois," and as in every case he gives the hieroglyphic spelling of the name it presents an inexpensive "Book of the Pharaohs" not exceeding the purchasing limits of students and scholars, such as has never been within their reach before.

In passing, one may be permitted to note how much better it would be if artists and scene-painters delineating Egyptian times would take the small trouble of copying correct drawings of hieroglyphic texts from such a book as this; imitators of Egyptian jewellery and artistic workmanship also should avail themselves of it. Unfortunately, it will be a perfect mine for the forgers of scarabs, and Ushabtis, but they are more likely to succeed in their deceptions by repeating the forms and text of the actual relics themselves.

As mentioned, this "Repertoire" is the guide to the great five-volume edition of the "Book of the Kings" forming Tomes 17 to 21 of the Memoires of the French Archaeological School. M. Gauthier has divided it into three parts: The complete enumeration with reproductions of the hieroglyphic names — all copies of the same in Hieratic or Demotic are omitted; a list of all known Pharaonic and Greek titles of Pharaohs and the Ptolemies; and also the Latin forms of the Emperors. He does not here supply those of the Prefects of Egypt in Roman times although they are given in his "Livre des Rois," but they were officials of Emperors and not themselves monarchs. He does however give the sole Index to the "Livre des Rois" which at the end of each of its 5 volumes has a complete index of its contents, but it is a sort of working tool for finding easily, if you are acquainted with the hieroglyphic alphabet, all that the monuments in the 5 volumes tell us about the names and titles, prenomens and determinatives of any sought-for Pharaoh or Emperor.

It must be remembered that all of them bore several names known as the Nebti name, the Golden Horus, and the Throne name, the Cartouche name, and frequently others. Then the spelling of the characters might, and often did, vary in each of these; for instance, M. Gauthier supplies more than 20 forms of inscribing the name of a King he spells Chechanqo, the Shishak of the Old Testament. A curious fact emerges from his catalogue which is that some eighteen of the Kings, or Emperors, style themselves Pharaoh (the word used for them in the Pentateuch) commencing with Tahaka IV., contemporary with some of the last Judean kings, and a title terminating with the Emperor Nero. There is no instance here of its being used as part of the royal title, the word in connection with the palace or the Court, frequently occurs in the very ancient "Story of Two Brothers" which contains a tale very similar to the account of Joseph and Potipher's wife. Although the notices attached by M. Gauthier in this summarising fascicule are naturally short he has added to each title all information necessary to identify precisely most of the persons cited. Several names, however, have appended to them, "unknown Hyksos king" or "King of such and such a dynasty" or Empire." These imperfect identifications are more frequent concerning queens, princes and princesses than in the case of Pharaohs who actually reigned. There are however five pages of uncertain or incompletely preserved names, with suggestions as to what dynasty they may probably be assigned to.

We think it might have been advisable where a name is to be found upon the Palermo stele, and those of Sakhara, Memphis, and Abydos and not only in the Manetho and Turin papyrus lists to have mentioned this just by initial letters, but doubtless all these particulars are duly provided in the "Livre des Rois" which in war time has not been issued in Europe. Of course, additions necessitated by fresh discoveries will have to be made to M. Gauthier's great enumeration. He has not appended lists to be able to peruse Prof. Flinders Petrie's enormous series of scarab facsimiles, nor Commandant Weill's "Aha" or "Palestinian" scarabs giving so many curious sign-types of names of Delta princes. The hieroglyphic spelling forth of the Ptolemaic, Persian and Roman names forms an excellent basis for studying the hieroglyphic script. One wonders what exclamation would escape Champollion, or Lepsius if they could turn over the pages of this splendid Magnum Opus.

The Roman names are not merely the cognomens of the Caesar's but often spell out their hallatory titles, such as Autocrator Sebastos and Augustus. Thus Britannicus may be found in hieroglyphs in the Livre des Rois V. 208; and Imperator Augustus, in one Cartouche, is "living for ever" and "beloved of Isis." The supplementary Ptolemaic titles are also often spelt out, such as Philometer, Philopator, Soter, and so on.

Then we have several names of Persian monarchs such as Cyrus Darius, Cambyses and Xerxes; the hieroglyphs for which, taken together with their Hebrew and Aramaic spelling in the Bible and the Elephantine papyri, afford a good idea of the pronouncation of these Aryan names among Semitic and Hamitic races. Whilst the cuneiform inscriptions give us their native forms.

The Old Testament Pharaoh Shishak has been mentioned but the names of all the other kings given by Hebrew writers are included—Ramses, Neco, Tirhaka, Sabaco, Apries or Hophra appear duly in their proper places. Somewhere among the Hyksos names must be that of Joseph's Pharaoh.

The Ethiopic kings are given, but whether M. Gauthier was able to utilise the numerous royal texts found by Dr. Reisner at Gebel Barkal does not appear. The last ruler whose name has been found inscribed in hieroglyphics was the Emperor Decius. The giving of all known queen names and those of parents and wives of kings, and princesses and princes facilitates the differentiation of Pharaohs bearing verbally identical names though the other varied the spelling of these. But the absence of an index to this "Repertoire Pharaonique" itself is a serious drawback as its necessary searching through all its many pages and over 1,000 names to find any Pharaoh's titles wanted, a matter of several hours' work.
