SATURDAY, JUNE 14, 1919

That the conditions of such a document as the Peace Treaty would give birth to criticism among the Allies as well as among the enemy Powers was obvious, and criticism among the Allies as well as among the enemy Powers was obvious, and among the various comments that have of late been passed upon it the letter, published in the latest London papers, in which Mr. William Bullitt, the "Assistant of the Department of State attached to the American Commission to "Negotiate Desco". the American Commission to "Negotiste Peace," amountess his resignation to Pre-sident Wilson, has attracted considerable attention. Mr. Builitt is a young man of great ability who came to Europe with the President full off enthuisam for the new world which, with the eye of faith, he saw rising on the ruins of the old Eu-ope. He is now, with five of his col-league; giving back, and and allimetoired, and he addresses the President as a little similer than Mr. Builitti, and the signature of the similer than Mr. Builitti, and the signature of the similer than Mr. Builitti, and the signature of the similer than Mr. Builitti, and the signature of the similer than Mr. Builitti, and the signature of the signature of the similer than Mr. Builitti, and the signature of the signature of the similer than Mr. Builitti, and the signature of the signature of the similer than Mr. Builitti, and the signature of the signature of the similer than Mr. Builitti, and the signature of the signatur reader. But President Wilson's t simple than Mr. Bullitt appears While Mr. Bullitt was writing to him.Senator Sherman was also him in the Senate on quite oppos to him. Senator Sherman was also attacking him in the Senate on quite opposite lines— attacking him for his attempt to set up the League of Nations, for having given too little where Mr. Bullitt thought he had given too much, for having given too much, for having "betrayed" Poland by not giving her Danzig, for having compromised the independence of America by joining in guarantees for the new world-order. Mr. Bullitt thinks that greater publicity would have enabled the President to steer a clear course between the distractive course research. rresument to steer a clear course between th distracting cross-ourrends of European affairs; but with the abundant proofs be-fore us of the far greater skill and re-sourcefulness with which the apostles of Chauvinism have wiglded that weapon than the champions of the new order, it is impossible to be quite certain about that its works.

The President's example rather than Mr. Bullitt's is to be commended to others who feel the Treaty to be a disappointment of high hopes. They have to stick to it, whatever comes. The simple remedy, which is open to Mr. Bullitt, gf betaking possible to be quite certain about that courselves we are heartily glad that eddent Wilson does not, like his zealoudisciple, despair of the job, or cast off the dust of his shoes against Europe and all themselves across the Atlantic and retiring to some solitude in the far west. is not open to them. They have known from the be-ginning the conditions in which they would have to fight for the new order, tha would have to fight for the new order, that its foundations would inertiably be laid at the moment least propitious but most impergitive for its birth, and that it would need to be unread into a durable existence by years of patient and undismayed effort. Only so could it be born, and only so can it be brought into life. So we counsel the SOME IMPORTANT EVIDENCE.

The court resumed its sitting, with the mem members present. Mediumed Bey Narat continuing deposed that on March 20 two demonstratives and the sitting of the si tt be brought into life. So we counsel the impatient idealists to hold on and to re-member that this Treaty gives us for the first time the beginnings of a rational Government for the world, and provides for the continuous co-operation of the for the continuous co-operation of the Governments with a permanent secretariat and at least a skeleton administration. The Treaty, as Lord Robert Cecil said last month, will not work without the League of Nations, and the League of of Nation, we may add, will not be able to work the Treaty unless it has the power to work the Treaty unless it has the power to make those adjustments which it may be necessary to make in certain parts of Europe. When the Treaty is signed, all the Liberal forces in the world will have to combine to give it power and life, to arm it with authority, to help it to make arm it with authority, to help it to make the Treaty what they wish it to be. No doubt, the people of the United States will be as deaf to Mr. Bullitt as to Mr. Sherman, when either of them advises that they should refuse to "entangle the United States" by entering the League of United States" by extering the League of Nation between it does not for the moment arize them all they wish. If Mr. Bullitt ra his friends supposed, that he League was going at once to rid the world of the danger of war, or that the United States could enter it without undertaking any liability, they were bound to be disillusioned. There is no such security, there is only a rational belief and hope that if the nations will stand together and realies that they are all in dagers they may, by common action, reduce their risks to a minimum and gradually sedrove the rule committee was not competent to give decisions at the rallway.
